

“Brimming with insight, humour, passion, affection, pathos, and an eye for detail — all the ingredients of a well-crafted tale!”

Memoirs of Fred and Mary Sherwood

It's Not the Ships Life-long Ottawa resident Fred Sherwood's thoughtful and amusing account of his ancestors, early years, and World War II exploits — he was the only Canadian to command a Royal Navy submarine.

Outward Bound In an engaging and perceptive style, Mary Sherwood née Clarke tells of growing up as the daughter of English expatriates in Chile and serving as a Wren officer during World War II.

People Will Say We're in Love In June 1944, Fred and Mary meet on a blind date at the Silver Fawn nightclub in Colombo, Ceylon. Their wartime service in the Far East, courtship, marriage, and early years together take them to five continents.

Lavishly illustrated and generously infused with diary entries and correspondence from the era.
